

Think About It

1. Anyone who says “Call Out the National Guard” to stop the violence among the youth is out of their mind.

National Guard in Detroit, Michigan 1967, called in to put down righteous rebellion: 3 unarmed Black teenagers executed at the Algiers Motel, total dead, 43. 1,189 injured.

National Guard at Kent State 1971, killed 4 students protesting the Vietnam War.

National Guard in Iraq.

National Guard in New Orleans, after Katrina.

2. Calling for more police to “protect” the youth today, is like calling for more Ku Klux Klan to protect Black people 50 years ago. More police flooding the communities, jacking up the youth, and shooting people is not the solution.

Mark Anthony Barmore with his hands up was murdered by police in Rockford in front of 10-12 children in a church daycare center. He was unarmed.

Corey Harris, 1st Chicago Public School student killed this year. Shot in the back by Chicago police, Sept 11, 2009. He was unarmed.

3. Saying “Where were the parents?” ends up blaming the victims instead of the actual cause of violence among the youth and cause of police violence against the youth.

This system sees millions of youth as nothing but a “social problem.” It is a crime of THIS SYSTEM that the youth internalize the message they get every day that this system has no future for them and that they don’t even deserve a future—and then the youth act it out against each other.

This system offers the youth no future, no meaningful life, nothing to live for: The revolution does.
